About NICHQ

NICHQ is an independent nonprofit organization working to improve children's health, with an emphasis on helping our most vulnerable children and youth. We help organizations and professionals who share our mission make breakthrough improvements so children and families can live healthier lives.

Formed in 1999 with start-up funding from the David and Lucile Packard Foundation to address issues of quality in ambulatory pediatrics, our predominant efforts in our early years focused on improving care for children with asthma, ADHD, and other conditions requiring special healthcare needs. As NICHQ has grown, we have expanded beyond our original focus on children's healthcare to also include an emphasis on many other social and community influences of children's health. We now seek improvement more broadly in topics such as childhood obesity and infant mortality, which require building bridges between healthcare, public health and community.

NICHQ has approximately 30 employees who make lasting impact on the lives of children. Recent programs have resulted in:

- 20,000 more children receiving comprehensive wellness assessments and appropriate immunizations each year in Massachusetts
- >200,000 people exposed to healthy weight messages in their community
- 11,520 more mothers receiving the support they need at hospital discharge to continue breastfeeding at home
- 76% increase in the percentage of patients with sickle cell disease given a speedy pain assessment
- 500 more infants receiving appropriate follow-up care for hearing loss
